Bridges Looks For Congress To Dilute Ike's Defense Plan

Battle Will See Party Lines Forgotten

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Bridges (R-NH) predicted Sunday Congress will water down President Eisenhower's reorganization plan and restrict his power to transfer military funds.

Agreeing that there will be modifications, Sen. Mansfield (D-Mont) called for establishment of an independent commission to supervise scientific research and development.

Bridges, who heads the Senate Republican Policy Committee, and Mansfield, assistant Democratic leader, have joined in sponsoring legislation that would reduce the staff of the secretary of defense and limit some of his authority.

Fight Launched By Ike

Eisenhower has asked for increased power for the secretary to set up unified defense commands and to assign combat functions. He proposed an increase in authority for the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff with consolidation of planning under him.

Eisenhower declared an intention to fight for his proposals, and already he has taken what for him is the unusual course of labeling them as the fact is that the proposals are relatively moderate.

Stanford Plans World's Biggest Atom Smasher

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP)—Stanford University is planning to build the world's largest linear atom smasher.

Prof. I. L. Schiff, executive head of the Stanford physics department, said Sunday the accelerator would occupy a two-mile-long tunnel bored into the coast range back of the university and would generate power up to 45 billion electron volts.

The world's largest atom smasher at present is in the Soviet Union and is the cyclotron type which whips protons around in a circle before blasting them at the atomic targets.

The type Stanford contemplates shoots much smaller electrons in a straight line.

Hoover Improving After Operation

NEW YORK (AP)—Former president Herbert Hoover was reported resting comfortable Sunday following an operation for removal of his gall bladder.

Hoover, 83, underwent the operation Saturday at Harkness Pavilion of Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center.

A medical bulletin said of his condition: "Mr. Hoover had a quiet, post-operative night. His temperature this morning was 100 pulse 66, respiration 20, blood pressure 140 over 70. He has no particular complaints and is resting comfortably."

Eisenhovers Return From Camp David

WASHINGTON (AP)—President and Mrs. Eisenhower returned to the White House Sunday evening after a weekend at Camp David, a mountain retreat outside Thurmont, Md.

The President spent a leisurely Sunday.

It was a day of complete relaxation and inactivity — no trout fishing, no golf practice, not even any meandering around Camp David — a White House spokesman said.

West Tactics Catch Russia By Surprise

Summit Strategy Apparently Swings Initiative To Big 3

LONDON (AP)—Sudden Soviet caution in approaching the summit has created an impression among diplomats here that the West had caught the Kremlin off guard.

For the first time, the Western Powers seemed to have seized the initiative in the bid for world opinion by agreeing to preparatory talks for the top-level conference.

Britain, France and the United States were reported united in a determination to press forward to test Soviet sincerity. Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko appeared to be maneuvering for time by meeting the Western ambassadors individually, instead of together.

Blunt Challenge

The Russians have been confronted with what amounts to a blunt challenge to show their old enthusiasm for a summit meeting.

British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd accused the Russians of stalling by telling a Conservative party political meeting Saturday: "They met the three Western Powers together around the table at Geneva in 1955. Why they should now refuse to receive the three Western ambassadors is beyond my comprehension."

Among diplomats in this capital hopes admittedly are not high of a summit conference achieving concrete results — even among those favoring talks. The Americans particularly have accused Moscow of merely waging propaganda — and opened themselves to some criticism among neutrals and even allies for taking a negative attitude.

Russians "Dragging Feet"

In Britain, the influential Manchester Guardian has often been critical of the attitude of President Eisenhower and U.S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

But Soviet maneuvering since the West agreed to preparatory talks at the ambassador level drew this comment from the Guardian:

"It will be surprising if the world does not now feel it is the Russians who are dragging their feet along the road to the summit."

Weeks said the employment figures for March — when joblessness rose slightly and unseasonably and employment gained less than seasonally — were "better than I thought they'd be." He added: "I'll bet anybody, now, that April will be better than March."

The interview followed a week in which several manufacturers reported a brisk upturn in new orders, the stock market perked up, a few scheduled layoffs were canceled, and some communities staged successful sales promotions built around price cuts and a "buy your way to prosperity" theme.

One token of reviving business confidence, Weeks suggested, is the attitude of business toward tax reduction. "Among people I've talked to," he said, "those who don't favor tax cuts now are great outliers who do."

Another straw in the wind, Weeks said, is furnished by advertising plans. "Magazine people tell me their advertising bookings for the second half of this year are somewhat ahead of second half 1957," he said.

However, in a separate interview with Rep. Keating (R-NY) filed for New York stations, Weeks said he prefers a tax cut to stepped-up public works spending as a means of stimulating the economy.

Einstein Award Won By Marian Anderson

NEW YORK (AP)—Singer Marian Anderson is the winner of the 1958 Albert Einstein Commemorative Award in the Arts.

The awards were established three years ago on the first anniversary of Einstein's death. They are presented each year by the Albert Einstein College of Medicine of Yeshiva University for outstanding achievement in the arts, humanities, citizenship, science and medicine.

Study Urges Tax Cut As Quickest Way To Counter Slump

NEW YORK (AP)—A wide-ranging economic study Sunday recommended a cut in taxes as the quickest way to counter the downcycle in business and employment.

No specific figure for the proposed reduction was given in the report, released by the Rockefeller Brothers Fund, but it said:

"Of the anti-recession measures available to the federal government, tax reduction can be effective in the shortest time. This panel believes that a tax cut would help overcome the current recession and expand employment."

Recent reports indicated that the study would recommend a reduction of five billion dollars in taxes. On this point, the report said: "The precise amount should

Bidault To Try Hand At Ending French Crisis

Grudge Against Church 24-Year-Old Father Gives Up In Shotgun Wounding Of Nuns

PARIS (AP)—Former Premier Georges Bidault, member of the Catholic Popular Republican Movement — MRP — agreed Sunday to try to form France's 25th postwar government. He was given little chance of success.

Bidault, 59, who also has served as foreign minister, was the first French leader asked by President Rene Coty to try to solve a five-day-old crisis impelled by the toppling of Premier Felix Gaillard's government in debate on a Tunisian settlement.

By tradition, the President first nominates one of the leaders responsible for the fall of the previous government and in recent years the first man chosen has had to give a government formed or win Assembly approval.

Bidault has been advocating a tougher French line toward any internationalization of the Algerian rebellion — the reason for most recent government crises, and an issue closely coupled with the Tunisian situation.

Coty withheld his choice until after the polls had closed in the first round of local elections to choose 1,574 county officials. A second round of voting will be held Sunday.

The premier-designate told newsmen Algeria remains the nation's No. 1 problem.

"Algeria is for us our heritage and our mission," he declared. "No intrusion, no concession to the spirit of abandonment can be tolerated."

He has charged in the past that the United States and Great Britain have violated the North Atlantic Treaty by sending arms to Tunisia. He claims the arms were then shipped to Algerian rebels who used them against France. It was in a fit of anti-American feeling that the assembly overthrew Gaillard.

Five Aged Women Drown When Car Plunges In Lake

NEWTON, Mass. (AP)—Five elderly occupants of a nursing home drowned Sunday when their driverless automobile rolled down a hill and plunged into Crystal Lake.

Half a dozen policemen and William Bruce, an assistant dean at Harvard Law School, made heroic but unsuccessful efforts to rescue the women — all 80 or over.

They plunged into the water but were unable to open doors of the submerged vehicle.

Police said the automobile with the women in it was left momentarily unattended while Mrs. Kenneth Watson, owner of the nursing home and driver of the car, went back into the house to get a coat.

As she was about to re-enter the automobile, the brake apparently released, police said, and the car began rolling with Mrs. Watson's vainly.

The vehicle knocked down a flagpole, plunged 30 feet down an embankment, and sped on before it took another 30-foot dip into the lake.

The dead were identified by police as Gertrude Cummings, 85, Hattie Gordon, 96, Esther Ross, 92, Bothilda Hendrick, 80 and Anna Dowling, 85.

Yugoslav Red Party Angered By Soviet Snub

LJUBLJANA, Yugoslavia (AP)—Yugoslavia's Communists were angered Sunday by a Soviet snub of their party Congress.

They gathered here for the first Yugoslav Communist party Congress since 1952 with the feeling they were heading for a new test of strength with Soviet communism.

The official Yugoslav news agency Tanjug announced Saturday night that Soviet and Eastern European Communist parties and some from the West are boycotting the meeting opening Tuesday.

While denying that U.S. Air Force operations threaten peace, Lodge is expected to stress the need for some international system to prevent surprise attack and mention President Eisenhower's 1955 open skies plan of mutual U.S.-Soviet aerial inspection.

The Soviet complaint on the Council's tentative agenda is titled "Urgent measures to put an end to flights by United States military aircraft armed with atomic and hydrogen bombs in the direction of the frontiers of the Soviet Union."

10-1 Soviet Defeat Forecast

A Soviet source said he expects

Sobolev to introduce a resolution on this subject. Delegates friendly to the United States predict any such resolution eventually will be beaten with only one vote in its favor—the Soviet Union's.

Diplomats generally expect the debate will touch on the Soviet suspension of nuclear tests, Soviet refusal to continue U.N. disarmament negotiations and East-West jockeying over a summit conference, as well as the issue at hand.

Tenement Fire Claims 6 Lives

NEW YORK (AP)—Five children and the father of four of them perished early Sunday in a blinding fire in a tenement. Officials blamed the fire on smoking carelessness.

Two explosions rocked the building during the blaze. One of the blasts blew two firemen off a ladder. They were seriously injured.

Quick-spreading flames trapped the man and the children sleeping in a second-floor apartment of the seven-story brick structure. The dead were Alfred Madirville, 31; his children, Sandra, 8; Robert, 4; Shirley Lee, 2, and Leopold, 5 months; and Yvonne Thomas, 4, who was visiting in the Madirville flat. All were Negroes.

Madirville's wife and their three other children were treated for smoke poisoning.

Twenty other families were evacuated from the burning building.

Eight other firemen and a policeman suffered slight injuries while battling the three-alarm fire.

The women will compete for $3,000 in prize money.

Vatican Exhibition Opens As Half Million Jam Fair

BRUSSELS (AP)—Nearly half a million visitors jammed the World's Fair in sunny weather Sunday, tying up traffic and apparently having a wonderful time.

Every pavilion was open record crowds. Belgium guides said the U.S. pavilion with its live fashion models was still drawing them all. The Russians were a close second with their Sputnik show.

Thousands witnessed the official opening of the Vatican's first exhibition at any World's Fair.

Msgr. Ephraim Forni, papal nuncio to Brussels, inaugurated Holy See's impressive building entitled: "Civitas Dei" — City of God.

One of the fair's most striking pieces of modern architecture, the Vatican's pavilion, is a church in the shape of an elongated triangle built to hold 2,500 persons.

The parades, commemorating the birth of Israel as a nation, is scheduled for Thursday in the Israeli sector.

A Jordan communiqué said U.N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld had been asked to order the parade called off. Foreign Minister Samir Rifai also informed U.S. and British representatives in Amman of Jordan's steps to counter the Israeli troops movement into the city.

The communiqué said the Jordan army had been directed to send in reinforcements immediately and to support these forces "with heavy weapons in quantities necessary to face the massing of Israeli forces in Israeli-occupied Jerusalem."

Israeli government sources contend the armistice treaty does not prohibit parades, although it does rule out the stationing of large numbers of troops and arms in the city.

Recent reports indicated that the study would recommend a reduction of five billion dollars in taxes. On this point, the report said: "The precise amount should be determined by the administration and Congress in the light of this private employment-generalization process, the businessman has a key role."

This was the second report written under the Rockefellers' special studies project. Nelson A. Rockefeller is chairman of the operation and president of the fund. More than 50 prominent business, newspaper editors, scientists, scholars and professional men serve on the panel.

The first report dealt with the military aspects of international security.

The economic report listed potential "immediate anti-recession measures" in six specific areas:

1. Private business. Through new products, better values, and aggressive selling, business can produce lower interest rates.
2. Monetary policy. "We urge the Federal Reserve system to move further to increase the supply of money and credit as long as the economy is declining. This on the economy, as ways to head off recessions."
3. Public works. "Only useful projects that can be quickly started — say within three months — and completed within a reasonable period — say within 12 to 18 months — should be initiated as part of the anti-recession program."
4. Monetary policy. "We urge the Federal Reserve system to long-term measures recommended by the report also to increase the supply of unemployment insurance, public works, and statistical checks as the economy is declining. This on the economy, as ways to head off recessions."
5. Employment compensation. "Emergency action must be taken. We agree that temporary federal supplements to unemployment compensation under state systems are necessary."
6. Top-level guidance. "There is need for an informal advisory committee to meet at the call of the President and under his direction... to consider and advise leadership... to stabilize policy, either anti-recession or anti-inflationary as appropriate."

Md. Teachers Assn. Lobbyists Stir New Gubernatorial Blast

BALTIMORE (AP) — Gov. McKelvin Sunday took another blast at a state tax on cigarette smokers to trim $163 million dollars from the new military pay plan approved by the legislature against a selected type of increase plan approved by the House.

But now that the tax has been imposed in spite of my objections, Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas advised fellow legislators that its yield should be used as senators that he hopes to call up the Legislature intended to increase the salaries of teachers... plan this week.

— and I do mean in addition to To do this will require speedy action by the Armed Services Committee, headed by Sen. Russell B. Stennis (D-Miss.), chairman of a subcommittee which conducted extensive public hearings, asked his five-member group to meet behind closed doors Monday.

In a speech last Wednesday, day. Once the subcommittee acts, McKelvin criticized representatives of the teachers' association must review the bill, probably at asking legislative candidates to The key idea of the new military pay plan is to encourage service careers for the thousands of skilled technicians needed to man complex new weapons and man nuclear submarines and ballistic missiles.

Under present pay scales many young officers and enlisted men turn in their uniforms for better-paying civilian jobs after completing their military service and training.

Officials Seek Cut In Military Pay Boost Plan

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Lee Ann Meriwether of San Francisco, Miss America of 1955, married Frank Aletter, New York actor, at St. Francis Episcopal church Sunday.

The bride, 22, wore a cream lace wedding gown and spoke her vows before a capacity crowd of 400 people. About 300 others waited outside to wish the couple well as they posed for cameras.

Aletter, 32, has been appearing in the Broadway play "Bell's Are Ringing." He arrived from New York Wednesday.

The Rev. Edward Pennell, pastor at St. Francis, performed the 45 minute nuptial Mass in the flower-decked church.

Batista Holds Firm Control

HAVANA (AP) — Strife in Cuba appeared Sunday to be settling down into an uneasy calm, with President Fulgencio Batista firmly in control. Rebel attacks have tapered off nearly everywhere.

How long the comparative peace will last was anybody's guess. But it was clear that rebel leader Fidel Castro was being forced to re-vamp his strategy after dealing himself near mortal blows.

What public support he might have had dwindled after the failure a week ago of a general strike call and armed uprisings in Havana and Santiago de Cuba. Furthermore, he has been sending rebel units out of his mountain hideouts in eastern Oriente Province to battle numerically superior and better-equipped government troops.

These excursions have cost Castro—by unofficial estimate—300 killed and wounded since April 1.

Known government losses are less than a score killed and wounded.

Castro had managed to wage guerrilla war for the last 16 months by sticking close to the mountains. But by sending his guerrillas out along the highways and into small towns in Oriente he gave the Cuban army its first chance to take a crack at rebels in open battle—and the soldiers made the most of it.

Family Income Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government reported Sunday that average family income last year was $6,130—about 50 per cent higher than a decade ago. The 10-year increase was 20 per cent when taking increased living costs into account.

door. Guidotti said the gunman then went into the convent.

Seconds later, Sister Lorenzina who came from Italy to help found the convent 22 years ago, and Sister Angela, fell wounded before two more shotgun blasts.

The street, in a packed residential section of south Trenton, was crowded with strollers and children playing in the warm spring dusk.

At the sound of the shooting, there was a dash for cover. The three nuns were aided quickly by priests and passersby and taken to St. Francis Hospital.

A police car pulled up and Patrolman Earl Bechtel dashed out to get a little girl off the street. Patrolman Gene Johnson covered his partner with gunfire.

A blast fired from the attic of the convent annex ripped the windshield of the police car, pinning Johnson. Another shot nicked Konck in the mouth.

In minutes, some 50 policemen circled the school, convent and annex. A crowd that grew to thousands stood behind ropes to watch the bloodied spectacle.

Occasionally the gunman fired from the attic window. Each burst was met with a hail of fire from police pistols, rifles and submachine guns. Tear gas was fired into the attic window.

Then more than an hour passed without a shot from the supposedly encircled assailant. Police closed in and found nothing except the shotgun lying on a window ledge at the rear of the annex.

Rutkowski said Marrero escaped by jumping from the attic window to a porch roof and from there to the ground. Marrero then mingled with the crowd and walked off. Rutkowski said.

Fatal Glider Crash Probed

ADELANTO, Calif. (AP) — Wreckage of a shattered glider was studied Sunday in an effort to find out why a wing fell off, plunging Bob Symons, a daring pilot, to his death on a dry lake bed.

Symons, 48, one of the heroes of the rescue of four Stanford University students from an 11,600-foot peak in the mountains near here three weeks ago, appeared to be unconscious as the glider plunged after being cut loose from a tow plane Saturday.

The plane pilot, Chuck Siebert, said he thought he got a signal from Symons to release the glider at 1,400 feet. He said he banked sharply after releasing the glider and a wing of the motorless craft flew past his plane.

Symons, who lost a leg 22 years ago in a farm accident, once held the world altitude record for a two-place glider—38,650 feet.

Three weeks ago he dared stormy mountain weather in a light plane to find the four Stanford students marooned on a ledge. He dropped them food, clothing and medicine and later guided an Army rescue helicopter to their perch.

At Least 4 Killed On Md. Highways

(By The Associated Press)

The weekend brought death to at least four persons on Maryland highways. A fifth person died in a fire.

The minor fire occurred late Saturday night in a South Baltimore rowhouse. A roofer, Peter Burke, 68, was dead on arrival at South Baltimore General Hospital.

One man was killed early Sunday in a collision on U.S. 111 in the northern part of Baltimore County near Hereford.

County police at Cockeysville said the victim, Howard M. Cole, 57, of Parkton, was driving south when Lonnie J. Phillips, 40, of Maryland Line, attempted to pass and cut back too quickly.

Phillips was in good condition in Baltimore's Union Memorial Hospital with a broken left arm and facial cut.

Other weekend victims included:

Billy Joe Spence, 3, of Baltimore, struck and killed Sunday afternoon by a car eastbound on Hollins Street in Baltimore. City police charged the driver, Harry W. McCadden, 21, of Hughesville, Charles County, killed Friday night in a collision on Maryland 488 1½ miles east of La Plata.

Crowds At Ball Irk Belgian King

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — King Baudouin said goodby to a flock who won the unofficial title of pretty European princesses Sunday but gave no hint he may have selected one as his future queen. He may have been too angry to ask.

For the 27-year-old bachelor King had no privacy at the first ball of his seven-year reign. Every time he tried to dance with one of the 11 princesses he asked to his gala party, swarms of curious guests surrounded him and stared at him as if were a man from Mars.

More than 6,000 persons were invited to Belgium's first royal ball in 24 years. They stood on chairs, shoved one another, packed the ballrooms and made dancing impossible.

Irked, the King finally ordered his courtiers to bar the doors of one of his two ballrooms. At least he got in some dancing, but no real privacy.

Princesses at the royal ball included: Maria Gabriella de Sa-

Senator Byrd's Wise Counsel

As the leading exponent of solvency in government and balanced budgets to combat inflation, the comments of Sen. Harry F. Byrd of Virginia are always interesting. He favors public works instead of tax reduction.

"To some extent there will be wasteful spending in accelerating public works," said Senator Byrd, "but I am confident that the majority of Democrats in Congress would rather follow that course than to reduce taxes now."

Byrd assumes that it will be impossible for the Treasury to avoid going into the red during the next fiscal year. Estimates of federal revenues for that year are probably $2 billion too high. And Senator Byrd predicts federal spending will be $3 or $4 billion dollars above the budget. That adds up to a deficit of $5 or $6 billion.

The Virginian doesn't favor going farther than that. He suggests that a tax cut, to do any good, would have to cut federal revenues by $6 billion at least. That cut, in addition to lower revenues and public works, would unbalance the budget by $12 billion or more.

"If we went in the red that much," says Senator Byrd, "it is uncertain when we would ever get back on a sound basis."

This appeal for moderation is appealing. Senator Byrd's thinking is undoubtedly as wise as it was in boom times when he proposed cutting federal expenditures and applying surpluses to the public debt. America would be stronger today if it had followed that advice.

The Money Trust

It is an old story in the United States that the power over the flow of money tends to become concentrated. Wall Street has become the symbol of such a concentration because Wall Street is the money market of the country. Usually, it is spoken of as the stock market, but a share of stock is nothing more than a receipt for money, negotiable and exchangeable and having fluctuation value because it can be sold for money.

Populistic and other agrarian movements, throughout American history, have been aimed at the money power and there have been innumerable Congressional investigations, one of the most significant being the Pujo Committee (1912-13) which directly attacked the money trust. Laws have been set up to control private power over the money of the nation and its uses in the market for the distribution of money into new and expanding industry and commerce.

For this purpose, the SEC was organized and controls were set up with the object of policing the flow of money from the public into enterprises. There are only two places where large reservoirs of money exist, namely, in the government, either by the accumulation of taxes, or among the people's savings wherever deposited. The SEC has neither the money nor the personnel to do an adequate job of policing the use of money in stock transactions. It is now up against a larger and more concentrated money power than J. P. Morgan ever knew, and it lacks the facilities, to say nothing of the will, to do the job.

The very able writer on financial matters, Leslie Gould, has often called attention to the failures and faults of the SEC and whereas his facts are always correct, I am not sure that blaming the SEC adequately covers the problem. First, the law is inadequate; secondly, SEC should either be an administrative or a judicial body and not both as it is now; thirdly, the pay of commissioners should be high enough to attract personnel who will not eventually have to seek positions in the areas of financial activity over which SEC has control.

It is not true that men are corrupt when a government, which wastes billions on Fiji and Hotton, allows $12 a day for travelling expenses and then brands a man a crook who accepts hospitality. It is impossible to get a room in a large city hotel for a man, to say nothing of his wife, for $12 a day. Then there is food, transportation and other incidental expense. It is ridiculous to give a man a high-sounding title and a big room with a big desk and all the trappings of authority and then provide him with a travelling allowance that does not conform to his position or work, and require him to travel as part of his work.

So, he accepts hospitality and falls under obligations. So, he figures that he had better look around for the day when he can afford to do something for his family. It is mundane considerations of this type, rather than crookedness that keep all our government administrative bodies inadequately organized and poorly managed.

The money trust, unorganized but brought together by cooperative process, by interlocking directorates, by lawyers, accountants, fixers, and so-called policy advisers, rarely is constructive. The object is to take control of enterprises which able men built. The men in the money trust direct the flow of credit where they choose; they withhold it, in various manners, from those who will not let them in. They need not combine in restraint of trade. That is an old-fashioned device which means nothing. All they do is to make money accessible to those enterprises they favor; to withhold credit or make credit difficult for those who displease them. They serve on boards and committees and they control.

In the end, they can take over and the more successful the enterprise, the more ready they are to take over.

This needs Congressional investigation and judicial process. This has not happened in recent years, in a single instance, not matter how startling. Certainly, the Montgomery Ward and the various Silbermann take-overs were as startling as any this country has ever known. Until such investigations are made fully and constructively, the money trust will continue to concentrate power for the abuse of the free enterprise system.

Never Comfortable In That Chair

Auto Manufacturers Didn't Cause Recession

By Joseph Alsop

WASHINGTON
In dealing with the depression, the Eisenhower administration has now pretty firmly committed itself to the happy principle of hoping for the best without preparing for the worst.

It is a comfortable system, if it works. But if you take a long, hard look at the situation in Detroit, as this reporter has just done, you must conclude that the President has embarked on a fairly hair-raising gamble.

This is because the President is clearly gambling on a big improvement in the limping automobile industry, when the changeover to the new models occurs in late summer. The automobile industry customarily chews up a fifth of the steel, nearly two thirds of the rubber, and fantastic percentages of the fabrics, glass, aluminum and scores of other things that this country produces. If the motor industry continues to limp, therefore, other key sectors of the American economy will limp also.

It is childish and petty to do what the President recently seemed to do—blame the motor manufacturers for the recession, on the ground that they have misjudged the public taste in new automobiles. The manufacturers have to back their judgment of public taste, after all, with annual investments of hundreds of millions of dollars. They suffer acutely when and if they bet wrong, as they seem to have done this year; and one can only admire their willingness to go on making this sort of bet on such a staggering scale.

But if the President thinks the motor manufacturers bet wrong in 1958, then it is highly likely he is betting wrong, too. For the 1959 models were not designed after the American public's taste for dropside juke boxes began to be sated. They were designed, and the dies for them were ordered at fabulous expense, no less than eighteen months ago. Hence the new cars are virtually certain to be continuations and perhaps even exaggerations of the style of car the President seems to think the public no longer wants.

In other words, the most vital question in the economic future is whether the American public will rush to buy the new cars that will begin to pour out of the Detroit and other automobile factories next September. But this is really a question—give or take a few dabs of chromium—of whether the American public will rush to buy next September very much the same sort of car the American public is conspicuously not rushing to buy today.

God forbid that this reporter should seem to forecast the answer to any question that is at once so arcane, so important, and so remote from his own limited experience. It is plainly a serious question, that has to be noted because it has so much bearing on the President's gamble.

There is another question, too, that also needs to be noted, although once again this reporter has no notion of the answer. In brief, how great will be the feedback effects of the existing level of unemployment in our great

Baering Down On The News

Give our fellow travellers enough rope and they'll sing the Volga Boat Song.

They staged an anti-atom parade here protesting against orbits, astrolabs, launching pads and general all-around space.

They don't understand we have to run a satellite over the tracks once a day or lose the franchise.

If they want to play the Kruschev game why don't they go back where they shouldn't have come from?

Their parade isn't going to make any more difference than a knot in spaghetti. But a prow with banners will accomplish a lot of things.

That's the way women got the vote, that's how Prohibition started and that's how Grandma got back from the ride in the covered wagon.

I never did care much for this looseleaf book-keeping with portable sign-posts. Every time a cop whacks you with a dizzy stick your editorial policy changes.

The parade disappeared somewhere in a blizzard. Last heard of it was a feeble bleep-bleep from a life.

The American Cancer Society's Big Battle

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

This means that if you have cancer and go for treatment now, there is a 50-50 chance that the condition will be remedied.

Statistics can be misleading, however. Some types of cancer grow more slowly than others and the outlook varies with the location of the lesion. With early diagnosis and treatment there is an 81 per cent chance of being saved when the malignancy is in the breast; a 70 per cent chance if it is located in the uterus; 95 per cent with skin cancers; 77 per cent of rectal malignancies; 65 per cent of lung cancers.

It is true that not all physicians are equipped to make a thorough examination but more and more of them are receiving new information on the disease as well as acquiring the latest tools for diagnosis. Facilities for cancer treatment have increased 66 per cent since 1945.

Much of the stimulus stemmed from the activities of the American Cancer Society. This organization hopes to collect 30 million dollars in 1958 to spend on research, education, and treatment equipment. Research is the most costly single item. But it would be cheap if it proved, for example that all cancers are caused by viruses, if it uncovered a substance to build resistance to cancer, or if a single product, such as an antibiotic, could be found that could kill cancer cells.

LIVER AND LIQUOR

J. R. F. writes: Modern liquor—for commercial reasons—is being filled with various chemicals. I wonder if this is causing cirrhosis of the liver?

REPLY

No, except that the normal, well balanced diet helps keep the entire body healthy. There are no specific foods for specific organs despite the old wives' tale that fish is good for the brain.

MUSCLE FATIGUE

Mrs. E. M. writes: A friend of mine has spells where she is unable to keep her eyes open. There is no pain but the lids feel very tired. Would you have any idea of what this trouble is?

REPLY

Your friend may have myasthenia gravis. In this disease the muscles of the eyelids become so fatigued after a short period of use the individual cannot keep them open. With adequate rest, fatigue disappears and the cycle then repeats itself.

This woman ought to consult a physician because diagnostic tests as well as treatments are available.

Mr. T. A. V. writes: What is your opinion of the idiotic practice of going bareheaded in winter weather?

It must be safe, so many people do it without ill effects. I prefer a hat because it is warmer and keeps my hair in place.

Chairman Harris Drags His Feet On Investigation Of FCC Doings

By Drew Pearson

mission have certainly dropped since a few years ago.

The FCC staff, which bears the chief brunt of handling the 101 details of awarding valuable TV channels, recalls the day when the Radio Corporation of America invited a group of FCC officials to attend a demonstration at Princeton, N. J. When Chairman Wayne Coy learned that RCA had paid everyone's hotel bill, he hit the ceiling.

Harris made it all too clear in the past that he didn't want a real investigation. Last summer he delayed weeks before permitting ex-chairman Morgan Moulder of Missouri to pick a staff. After the staff was picked and tried to get busy, Harris fired the chief counsel, Dr. Bernard Schwartz.

Later, Harris secretly fired the chief investigator, Baron Schacklett, though he was the man who dug up the facts on Commissioner Richard Mack in Miami which forced Mack's resignation.

When news of Schacklett's dismissal reached other committee members they put up such a protest in a closed-door session that Harris was forced to rehire him. Congressman Charles Wolverton, New Jersey Republican, was one who protested. So did Congressman John Bell Williams of Mississippi. Both men, after getting off to a slow start, have demanded a thorough probe.

Chairman Harris's current tactics are to drag out the investigation, take up time with unimportant details, and hold hearings without sufficient preparation. Thus the public gets bored, and important evidence is muffed.

FCC Morals

Moral standards around the Federal Communications Com

mass industries? Going among the automobile workers, you begin to suspect that the feed-back effects will be very grave indeed, unless there is a big job pickup in the near future.

The vast labor force of these mass industries has experienced stable employment at high wages, protected by strong unions, throughout the whole period since the war. Until they lost their jobs, these workers regarded joblessness as unthinkable. They have been further tempted by the Eisenhower administration's remarkably relaxed consumer credit policy.

As a result, the workers in the mass industries have mortgaged themselves to the hilt. They are carrying time payments on everything from automobiles to wall-to-wall carpeting. The big layoffs in the automobile industry occurred in December and January. Thus far, with the help of the unemployment benefits, the time payments have generally been met by Detroit workers I talked with.

But this spring, the time payments are not going to be met. They cannot be met much longer out of the reduced income provided by the unemployment benefits. So a great many tens of thousands of additional second-hand cars are highly likely to appear in the already-saturated used-car market, for instance, long before new cars can make new jobs.

Add the snowballing secondary effects of joblessness in the mass industries in cities like Detroit. Add the truly horrifying social effects on the people who are due to lose all they have gained from years of work. The sum of the addition is certainly not pretty.

Much ado . . .

Gayle came in from school excited. The books were flung onto the settee. She was gasping, "Daddy! Rocky got a ticket!" This was news indeed. Rock of Shrewsbury is our black German shepherd. He is known to Gayle as "Rocky," "Rock," "Wacky Wocky" and "The Beast." I waited for my favorite teen-ager to quiet down and begin to breathe through her nose.

"What did he get the ticket for?" I said. "Parking?"

The dog is big and lazy. He is 13 months of age and weighs 80 pounds. He is the only mutt I've ever known who eats lying down. Sometimes, when he is very tired, he doesn't eat the food at all—just kisses it a few times down the front door with a steak on the lawn and our boat.

He doesn't know any girl dogs. He has four legs and hasn't learned how to lift one. When guests walk in our backyard, Rocky sniffs them once and tries to jump into Gayle's arms. There isn't much you can do with a mutt like that. I'd like to introduce him to a pretty Police Dog who is an Italian haircut or something, but when the subject is mentioned—even when we spell it—he shudders and runs.

One thing Ptl. Crammer did not know: Rocky has a big medal beside his license. It gives the name of his owner, his address and his phone number. A cop who got close enough to read the license number could also read the rest of it and would not have to go back to Boro Hall to find out who owned Rocky.

He is so big and formidable that when Gayle first clipped the medal on his collar, she said: "Now, if he ever gets lost, who is going to have the nerve to get close enough to read this thing?"

I was all set to go to court and have Mrs. Platt testify to the truth: that the dog had been indoors until 7:15 that morning when she assisted him into the backyard, etc. etc. Gayle was so thrilled at what Ptl. Crammer had done that she said: "May I go to court with you, Daddy?" Just for calling me that, I said sweetly.

Yesterday, our little thrill collapsed. Gayle came home. The chief says to forget the citation. It was a case of mistaken dog identity.

Much ado . . .

Grass, Brush Fire Warning Is Issued

Frostburg Company Answers 12 Calls

FROSTBURG — Paul Haberlein, chief of the Frostburg Fire Department, announced yesterday that 19 fire calls have been answered so far this month with 12 of them being grass and brush fires.

Chief Haberlein pointed out that most of the grass fires could have been prevented if precautions had been taken by those setting the fires.

When an alarm is sounded, he continued, the volunteer firemen drop whatever they are doing to answer the call.

When the call is for a fire that could have been prevented it is almost as bad as turning in a false alarm.

Valuable equipment is tied up said, and in case of a serious fire time, which is a valuable asset to the firemen, may be lost causing enormous losses.

He has asked that everyone be careful when burning brush, making sure that if it does get out of control, no damage could result, and definitely not to burn anything on windy days.

LONAConING — Mrs. Gorman Getty will be commentator as Mrs. Raymond Berry and Mrs. Nelson Keyes act as shoppers in the fashion salon on the Firemen's Armory stage, decorated to look like a palace with fabrics, contributed by Celanese Corporation of America for the benefit event tomorrow at 8 p.m. Proceeds will be used to buy eyeglasses for poor children.

Miss Sandra Dillon will be pianist for the fabulous model show of the new sack, spring and summer styles. West Virginia Pulp and Paper mill, Luke, contributed paper for use at this benefit show and Holmes and Company, Lonaconing, is furnishing dresses for the event.

A card party will follow in the Firemen's Armory. Tickets indicate a large attendance.

Rep. W. E. Neal Seeks Renomination

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Will E. Neal (R-WVa) announced Sunday that he has filed for renomination to the U.S. House of Representatives from West Virginia's 4th Congressional District.

The 82-year-old Huntington, W. Va., physician said he had mailed his candidacy with West Virginia's secretary of state in Charleston. Dr. Neal, now in his second two-year term in the House, was first elected to his present seat in 1952. He again was elected in 1956.

The Everlasting Mark Of Zorro

ply has Zorro on it. "Merchandising is a frame of mind in show business now. I hear that the 'My Fair Lady' album made more than 'My Fair Lady'." I had heard that, too, and also that Roy Rogers merchandise is an empire, for eclipsing the Roy Rogers derring-do on a horse. Obviously, the emphasis in the hero dodge is on commerce rather than on swordplay.

But not entirely. "I fenced as a boy the way other people play golf," said Williams. "My father taught me to fence when I was pretty small and I kept at it. In Hollywood I was doing pictures and TV when I heard there was a call out to play Zorro. The word went around that the actor who got the part had better be a good fencer. So I grabbed the old sword off the wall and went down. Best investment I ever made — fencing."

He has spurred interest in fencing, I told him, at least in my household. Michael now takes fencing at school, something that would never have occurred to him if Zorro were not on the air.

"In Zorro I do all the swordplay," said Williams. "But I won't jump off buildings. When you see someone running along a wall and then diving on top of a horse — that's not me. I turned my ankle, the whole production schedule would go out the window." In that respect the present generation of Zorros is not up to my son. Fairbanks was not up to his own jumping.

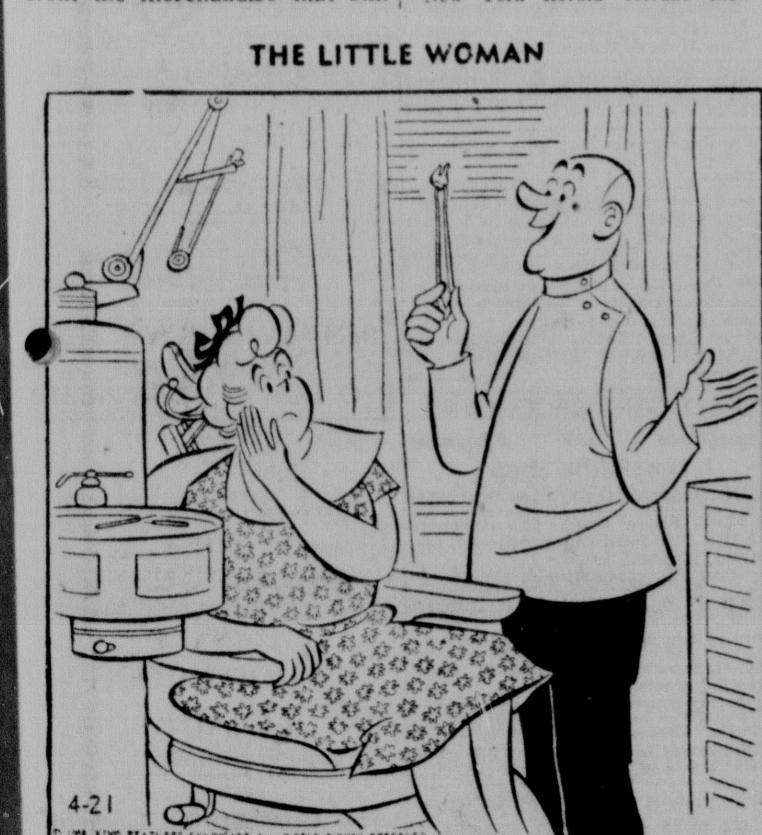

But then, Williams reminded me, Fairbanks didn't have to turn out a film a week. Turning out the first thirty-nine episodes Williams worked ten hours a day five days a week. Weekends he studied his lines for the next week. Fairbanks never had to do that.

The two swordsmen, Michael and Guy, started talking about the different techniques between saber and foil. "Learn your foil well," counselled the present Zorro. "If you can handle a foil well, everything else is easy — the saber, the epee. But first you must master the foil." My son promised he'd do his best.

Maybe he'll be the next Zorro. It's a role that goes on indefinitely.

Senator Byrd's Wise Counsel

As the leading exponent of solvency in government and balanced budgets to combat inflation, the comments of Sen. Harry F. Byrd of Virginia are always interesting. He favors public works instead of tax reduction.

"To some extent there will be wasteful spending in accelerating public works," said Senator Byrd, "but I am confident that the majority of Democrats in Congress would rather follow that course than to reduce taxes now."

Byrd assumes that it will be impossible for the Treasury to avoid going into the red during the next fiscal year. Estimates of federal revenues for that year are probably $2 billion too high. And Senator Byrd predicts federal spending will be $3 or $4 billion dollars above the budget. That adds up to a deficit of $5 or $6 billion.

The Virginian doesn't favor going farther than that. He suggests that a tax cut, to do any good, would have to cut federal revenues by $6 billion at least. That cut, in addition to lower revenues and public works, would unbalance the budget by $12 billion or more.

"If we went in the red that much," says Senator Byrd, "it is uncertain when we would ever get back on a sound basis."

This appeal for moderation is appealing. Senator Byrd's thinking is undoubtedly as wise as it was in boom times when he proposed cutting federal expenditures and applying surpluses to the public debt. America would be stronger today if it had followed that advice.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

The Money Trust

It is an old story in the United States that the power over the flow of money tends to become concentrated. Wall Street has become the symbol of such a concentration because Wall Street is the money market of the country. Usually, it is spoken of as the stock market, but a share of stock is nothing more than a receipt for money, negotiable and exchangeable and having fluctuation value because it can be sold for money.

Populistic and other agrarian movements, throughout American history, have been aimed at the money power and there have been innumerable Congressional investigations, one of the most significant being the Pujo Committee (1912-13) which directly attacked the money trust. Laws have been set up to control private power over the money of the nation and its uses in the market for the distribution of money into new and expanding industry and commerce.

For this purpose, the SEC was organized and controls were set up with the object of policing the flow of money from the public into enterprises. There are only two places where large reservoirs of money exist, namely, in the government, either by the accumulation of taxes, or among the people's savings wherever deposited. The SEC has neither the money nor the personnel to do an adequate job of policing the use of money in stock transactions. It is now up against a larger and more concentrated money power than J. P. Morgan ever knew, and it lacks the facilities, to say nothing of the will, to do the job.

The very able writer on financial matters, Leslie Gould, has often called attention to the failures and faults of the SEC and whereas his facts are always correct, I am not sure that blaming the SEC adequately covers the problem. First, the law is inadequate; secondly, SEC should either be an administrative or a judicial body and not both as it is now; thirdly, the pay of commissioners should be high enough to attract personnel who will not eventually have to seek positions in the areas of financial activity over which SEC has control.

It is not true that men are corrupt when a government, which wastes billions on Fijis and Hottentots, allows $12 a day for travelling expenses and then brands a man a crook who accepts hospitality. It is impossible to get a room in a large city hotel for a man, to say nothing of his wife, for $12 a day. Then there is food, transportation and other incidental expense. It is ridiculous to give a man a high-sounding title and a big room with a big desk and all the trappings of authority and then provide him with a travelling allowance that does not conform to his position or work, and require him to travel as part of his work.

So, he accepts hospitality and falls under obligations. So, he figures that he had better look around for the day when he can afford to do something for his family. It is mundane considerations of this type, rather than crookedness that keep all our government administrative bodies inadequately organized and poorly managed.

The money trust, unorganized but brought together by cooperative process, by interlocking directorates, by lawyers, accountants, fixers, and so-called policy advisers, rarely is constructive. The object is to take control of enterprises which abler men built. The men in the money trust direct the flow of credit where they choose; they withhold it, in various manners, from those who will not let them in. They need not combine in restraint of trade. That is an old-fashioned device which means nothing. All they do is to make money accessible to those enterprises they favor; to withhold credit or make credit difficult for those who displease them. They serve on boards and committees and they control.

In the end, they can take over and the more successful the enterprise, the more ready they are to take over.

This needs Congressional investigation and judicial process. This has not happened in recent years, in a single instance, not matter how startling. Certainly, the Montgomery Ward and the various Silberstein take-overs were as startling as any this country has known. Until such investigations are made fully and constructively, the money trust will continue to concentrate power for the abuse of the free enterprise system.

Never Comfortable In That Chair

Auto Manufacturers Didn't Cause Recession

By Joseph Alsop

WASHINGTON In dealing with the depression, the Eisenhower administration has now pretty firmly committed itself to the happy principle of hoping for the best without preparing for the worst.

It is a comfortable system, if it works. But if you take a long, hard look at the situation in Detroit, as this reporter has just done, you must conclude that the President has embarked on a fairly hair-raising gamble.

This is because the President is clearly gambling on a big improvement in the limping automobile industry, when the changeover to the new models occurs in late summer. The automobile industry customarily chews up a fifth of the steel, nearly two thirds of the rubber, and fantastic percentages of the fabrics, glass, aluminum and scores of other things that this country produces. If the motor industry continues to limp, therefore, other key sectors of the American economy will limp also.

It is childish and petty to do what the President recently seemed to do—blame the motor manufacturers for the recession, on the ground that they have misjudged the public taste in new automobiles. The manufacturers have to back their judgment of public taste, after all, with annual investments of hundreds of millions of dollars. They suffer acutely when and if they bet wrong, as they seem to have done this year; and one can only admire their willingness to go on making this sort of bet on such a staggering scale.

But if the President thinks the motor manufacturers were wrong in 1958, then it is highly likely he is betting wrong, too. For the 1959 models were not designed after the American public's taste for drop-sided juke boxes began to be sated. They were designed, and the dies for them were ordered at fabulous expense, no less than eighteen months ago. Hence the new cars are virtually certain to be continuations and perhaps even exaggerations of the style of car the President seems to have power no longer wants.

In other words, the most vital question in the economic future is whether the American public will rush to buy the new cars that will begin to pour out of the Detroit and other automobile factories next September. But this is really a question—give or take a few dabs of chromium—of whether the American public will rush to buy next September very much the same sort of car the American public is conspicuously not rushing to buy today.

God forbid that this reporter should seem to forecast the answer to any question that is at once so arcane, so important, and so remote from our limited experience. It is plainly a serious question, that has to be noted because it has so much bearing on the President's gamble.

There is another question, too, that also needs to be noted, although once again this reporter has no notion of the answer. In brief, how great will be the feedback effects of the existing level of unemployment in our great mass industries? Going among the automobile workers, you begin to suspect that the feed-back effects will be very grave indeed, unless there is a big job pickup in the near future.

The vast labor force of these mass industries has experienced stable employment at high wages, protected by strong unions, throughout the whole period since the war. Until they lost their jobs, these workers regarded joblessness as unthinkable. They have been further tempted by the Eisenhower administration's remarkably relaxed consumer credit policy.

As a result, the workers in the mass industries have mortgaged themselves to the hilt. They are carrying time payments on everything from automobiles to wall-to-wall carpeting. The big layoffs in the automobile industry occurred in December and January. Thus far, with the help of the unemployment benefits, the time payments have generally been met by Detroit workers I talked with.

But this spring, the time payments are not going to be met. They cannot be met much longer out of the reduced income provided by the unemployment benefits. So a great many tens of thousands of additional second-hand cars are highly likely to appear in the already-saturated used-car market, for instance, long before new cars can make new jobs.

Add the snowballing secondary effects of joblessness in the mass industries in cities like Detroit. Add the truly horrifying social effects on the people who are due to lose all they have gained from years of work. The sum of the addition is certainly not pretty.

Baering Down On The News

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer

Give our fellow travellers enough rope and they'll sing the Volga Boat Song.

They staged an anti-atom parade here protesting against orbits, astrolabs, launching pads and general all-around space.

They don't understand we have to run a satellite over the tracks this year; and one can only admire their willingness to go on making this sort of bet on such a staggering scale.

If they want to play the Kruscher's game why don't they go back where they shouldn't have come from?

Their parade isn't going to make any more difference than a knot in spaghetti. But a prawn with banners will accomplish a lot of things.

That's the way women got the vote, that's how Prohibition started and that's how Grandma got back from the ride in the covered wagon.

I never did care much for this loose-leaf book-keeping with portable sign-posts. Every time a cop whacks you with a dizzy stick your editorial policy changes.

The parade disappeared somewhere in a blizzard. Last heard of it was a feeble bleep-bleep from a fire.

The American Cancer Society's Big Battle

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

This means that if you have cancer and go for treatment now, there is a 50-50 chance that the condition will be remedied.

Statistics can be misleading, however. Some types of cancer grow more slowly than others and the outlook varies with the location of the lesion. With early diagnosis and treatment there is an 81 per cent chance of being saved when the malignancy is in the breast; a 70 per cent chance if it is located in the uterus; 95 per cent with skin cancers; 77 per cent of rectal malignancies; 65 per cent mouth; and 34 per cent of the lung cancers.

It is true that not all physicians are equipped to make a thorough cancer examination but more and more of them are receiving new information on the disease as well as acquiring the latest tools for diagnosis. Facilities for cancer treatment have increased 66 per cent since 1945.

Much of the stimulus stemmed from the activities of the American Cancer Society. This organization hopes to collect 30 million dollars in 1958 to spend on research, education, and treatment equipment. Research is the most costly single item. But it would be cheap if it proved, for example that all cancers are caused by viruses, if it uncovered a substance to build resistance to cancer, or if a single product, such as an antibiotic, could be found that could kill cancer cells.

According to present day figures, four out of six of these persons will die. One of the four will die needlessly because he could have been saved if the lesion had been diagnosed in time and proper treatment instituted.

Try And Stop Me

By Bennett Cerf

Buddy Hackett claims that he saw with his own eyes a Proper Bostonian come up to the theatre ticket agency in a Broadway hotel lobby, and ask, "Have you two reasonably priced seats for 'Tristan and Isolde' this evening?" A new clerk behind the counter grumbled, "Get outa here. You know we ain't allowed to sell tickets to no wrestling match in a classy hotel like this!"

Boston Suffers 5th
Loss In Six Games;
Bud Byerly Winner

WASHINGTON (P)—Roy Sievers' leadoff homer in the last of the 10th inning off Murray Wall boosted Washington to a 6-5 victory over Boston Sunday. Norm Zauchin also homered for the Senators, who beat the Red Sox for the third time in as many meetings.

Sievers, who led off the ninth inning Saturday with a home run that tied the game at 3-3 in a contest won by the Senators in the same inning, also contributed a triple and a double to the Senators' 13-hit attack.

The Senators bunched nine of their hits in the first three innings off Frank Sullivan and George Susce to take a 5-2 lead. But the Red Sox clipped Dick Hyde for two runs in the sixth when Sammy White walked. Don Buddin doubled and Dick Gerner injected a pinch single to score both.

Boston tied the score at 5-5 in the eighth when White tripled and Buddin singled to score Marty Keough, running for White.

Bud Byerly, the winner, was in trouble in the 10th when Pete Daley singled and Buddin doubled but the veteran right-hander fanned Wall and disposed of Jim Piersall on a fly to Sievers.

The loss was the fifth in six games for Boston.

Keeping Up With Hollywood

by Louella Parsons

HOLLYWOOD, April 20 (INS)—Personally I agree with J. Edgar Hoover that too many gangsters are being glorified in movies. But taking a realistic view point of it, as long as they make money (which means that YOU are buying tickets) they will continue to be made.

Mickey Rooney has just been set to star as Killer Mears in "The Last Mile," Max Rosenberg's movie for United Artists. This makes Mickey's second criminal role this year. Like it or not, his "Baby Face Nelson" cleaned up.

At least the part of Killer Mears has a semi-sentimental value in Hollywood. "The Last Mile" brought Clark Gable to Hollywood years ago in the stage version. Some jump for Mickey—he's just finishing "Andy Hardy Comes Home" at MGM and next, Killer Mears. I was rooting for Mickey to win an Emmy for his performance in "The Comedians."

C. V. "Sonny" Whitney has named his former public relation man, Arthur Wilde, vice president of the Whitney Production Company.

Sonny plans to make about one picture a year. He will bring on the market very soon a new wide screen camera which was developed by Merian Cooper and is something different we are told.

Pat Wayne, young son of John Wayne, is the only actor under contract to Whitney Productions at the moment, and his latest picture "The Young Land" has not yet been released. I happen to know that Sonny has his eye on a very valuable property, but I was sworn to secrecy.

When I met Noel Coward at a party when he and Eva Gabor were here in "Present Laughter," he told me that Eva has a brilliant future in the theatre.

I'm sure he'll be not in the least surprised that Eva will be starred this fall on Broadway in Alec Coppel's new comedy, "Gazebo," which Freddie Brisson is producing, as of now, it looks as if Tom Ewell will be the male star.

The youngest of the Gabors is due in New York in late summer to start rehearsals.

The only person outside her family who has been seen and talked with Cheryl Crane since she has been in the custody of Juvenile Hall is Mrs. Harry Brand, vice president of the City Welfare Committee.

Sybil, who went not as an officer but as a friend of the family, tells me that Cheryl looks well and has had no favors or attention given her than is given the other eighteen girls in her ward.

"Cheryl seems to do everything that is right," said Sybil, "and was so happy to see her father she kept hugging and kissing him."

The very distinguished cast of "The Devil's Disciple," namely Kirk Douglas, Laurence Olivier and Burt Lancaster, has the addition of a famous femme star in Eva La Gallienne. Eva hasn't been on the screen since she made "Prince of Players" for 20th Century-Fox some years ago.

She was out here a month ago to do a TV show and Burt Lancaster told her at the time about playing Mrs. Dudgeon, mother of Kirk Douglas who plays Dick Dudgeon.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

Nancy, Frank Sinatra's pretty daughter, spent the weekend with Frankie at the Las Vegas Sands. She did a song with Poppa.

Sad indeed are the reports out of the Menninger Clinic that the condition of Gene Tierney is not improved. However other equally serious cases have responded to treatment.

The christening dress worn today by Prince Albert de Monaco was made of priceless laces from the collection of Madame Lanvin and was a gift from Princess Poniatowska, daughter of Mr. Lanvin, cousin of Prince Albert. Prince Louis de Polignac was the godfather.

Had dinner at Chasen's with George Delacorte. He tells me girls that "Peyton Place" has sold the largest number of any book in the paperback editions. Over seven million copies have been bought. The closest was "Gone With the Wind" which rated six million.

Greg Peck's mother-in-law in Paris found a 17-room house for him and his family. The new addition is expected shortly.

That's all today. See you tomorrow.

Second Victim Of Accident Succumbs Here

March 27 Crash
Claims Abbott

Charles Robert Abbott, 24, of RFD 5, Fairgo, who was critically injured March 27 in a two-truck collision on U. S. Route 200 near Rawlings, died Saturday night in Sacred Heart Hospital.

William L. Lease, 33, Allegany Grove, operator of the panel truck in which Abbott was a passenger, was killed instantly in the crash.

Mr. Abbott sustained a fractured skull and internal injuries and had been on the critical list at the hospital ever since the accident.

The fatal accident was investigated by Trooper L. Wayne Lewis, who said the crash occurred when the truck driven by Lease failed to negotiate a slight curve in the road and smashed into the side of a heavy flatbed truck operated by James Ziler, 24, of Rawlings.

Mr. Abbott was born July 24, 1933, at Romney, W. Va., and was a son of Robert A. and Kathleen E. (Speelman) Abbott.

Steward Found Guilty Of First Degree Murder

Former Resident
Faces Death Penalty

ELKO, Nev. — A jury returned a first degree murder verdict and fixed the death penalty Saturday night for Earl L. Steward, 39, Baltimore and Cumberland, Md., charged with slaying a moving van driver.

Steward's only comment was a barely audible "thank you." The jury has been out for one hour and 40 minutes.

Dist. Judge Taylor Wines set April 25 for formal sentencing.

Dist. Atty. Grant Sawyer had asked for a first degree verdict for the slaying of 55-year-old Thomas R. Jessen of Jamaica, Iowa.

Claims Self Defense

"Don't turn this impulsive killer loose again, because next time it may be you," Sawyer told the jury of eight women and four men in his closing argument.

Sawyer charged Steward killed Jessen in cold blood while the men drove eastward across Nevada in a moving van.

Defense Atty. Keith Williams contended the shooting occurred in California and that Steward shot Jessen in self defense.

He asked for a acquittal on grounds of justifiable homicide.

Sawyer said it was the jury's duty not to allow Steward ever again to roam the streets.

"He has preyed on society ever since he was 14 and now he has graduated, finally, to murder," the prosecutor said.

Termed Incurable

Steward's criminal record began in 1933 and ranged through burglary, larceny and sex offenses.

Dist. Judge Taylor Wines' instructions gave the jury seven alternate verdicts, ranging from voluntary manslaughter to acquittal.

The final defense witness, Dr. William Barrett, Salt Lake City psychiatrist, who examined Steward in March, described him as an anti-social type who would tend to act impulsively.
